

Nathan Johnson is a busy man, he has a kid to take care of, work to go to, and online school to attend. A lot of times he is stress out and tends to have trouble managing his time between everything and with his son.

Because of Nathan's busy and cluttered schedule he is always stressed out and doesn't get much sleep. He feels like life is crumbling down around him because he forgets to do a lot of things and has no time for his personal mental health. Also he feels like his life where he had been making money in the streets were easier but doesn't want to go back to that for the safety of his son.

One day, Nathan searches and prays for ways that he can improve his time management and get his life back. So eventually he finds the TimeManagement app, a app that improves keeps track and helps people improve their time management skills throughout their life.

Nathan downloads the app and went straight to putting in his various things he has to do throughout the week. Once done with the setup he started to slowly see the improvements in his mental health started the gain his structure in his life back.

Nathan's life gets in track and his work and school life improves and most importantly his relationship with his son. He actually gets a healthy amount of sleep and his feels great in life.

Nathan's eventually graduates college, finds a new job, and moves out of New York City to Houston. He buys a beautiful house and gets his son into a good school. Life goes great for him and to this day still uses the app to succeed in his daily life.
